I think it's been a very positive event. The presentation has been very good. The subscription I heard was overwhelming. I think the quality of the panellists, from what I see, is also quite high, so I think it's going to be a great event.

We can clearly see that the topic is of interest when you see the room was completely packed, so that was really interesting. As well, most of the presenters discussed technology, and that's something that's really interesting to see - that technology now is really part of the compliance journey.

Today was a very, very good event. I liked it particularly because you managed to have compliance become something very interesting and interactive and attractive for people to discuss. I've seen people in the foyer talking agitatedly about something they've just heard in the panel. This is what you want. You want involvement, you want something they hear to be discussed and lived, and I think you really nailed it well today.

I think it's great participation and I think it's also heartening to see people who are the some familiar faces, people with whom I've started with in the industry more than 10 years ago. I think we're all learning, we're still evolving, and the fact is that we're still prepared to come together, network, exchange ideas and insights. It means that we're all invested in this business and we obviously have a commitment to see it grow and prosper.

I think once again it was a well-rounded event, covering many great topics that bring people up to date on what is happening in compliance, and providing valuable information on how to calibrate their own compliance.

Today was a very informative event filled with very, very eminent speakers and I think it was well worth the trip. Venue was fantastic. Screen was very good, so you can present well. Nice temperature. Food was fantastic. And most of all, I got time with Michael, which is the most important part of any of these events.

It's a great location, great to network and I just sense the energy, but obviously everybody's very concerned about compliance and especially BEPS and CRS. So it's a great place to be.

Well, the turnout is fantastic again. That's certainly something that I've noticed with the Hubbis events, great turnout. Everyone seems to be paying a lot of attention. A lot of events I've attended involving this type of area you see the room empties out by 4:00pm, but everyone's still here, so it's great.

There were some very interesting ideas, especially in respect to the use of technology. I personally picked up quite a few points. But as always, the things are complex enough that generalities do not lead you very far. And I have a little bit of scepticism whether technology is the answer. I think it's the human/technology interface that has to be looked at very critically. And I think then we are a bit ahead.

I think the panel was really great this morning. It seems like a really excellent turnout and the agenda also seems to be quite good. I think it's going to be a really good event today.

You've got a fantastic attendance, it's amazing. It just shows you one thing though, how concerned people are about the subject, which also then ties back to, is there enough that is being done to help them understand it? I think this event is very strategic, you guys have been very smart in positioning it to this time of the year, as people are asking questions about the enhanced, I wouldn't say new, regulations. It's good timing, it's strategic, it's comprehensive, and you've got a whole host of excellent speakers. I also find the speakers today tend to be a lot more open with their personal experiences, which is what such conferences should be doing.

It was a great event. I mean, always organised, very well attended, events with great content, which is why I'm always here.
